

Loyola to Launch On-Line Archive

This spring 2014 Loyola High School will launch its On-line Archive.

Loyola High School has a rich historical and visual Archive dating back to its beginnings in 1848 at Collège St. Marie. Preparations have been ongoing over the last year to bring this On-line Archive to all who wish to explore Loyola High School's historical and educational connection to the city of Montreal and to the English Speaking Catholic Community.

The On-line Archive will begin with an exploration of several collections including Loyola's Beginnings starting in 1848, Jesuits at Loyola and Hockey at Loyola: 1893 to 1950. The On-line Archive will continue to expand as more and more collections are uploaded to the site. As there are thousands of photos and text to prepare, the Archive is a work-in-progress.

We invite you to join Loyola and browse its nostalgic and vivid history.

Unveiling of Renovated Ed Meagher Arena

From 1951-60 Ed served a ten-year dual role as Athletic Director for both Loyola High School and Loyola College. In 1954 he was instrumental in bringing artificial ice to the Loyola College Stadium. In 1969 he was inaugurated into the Loyola College Hall of Fame. On January 28, 2000, the rink was named The Ed Meagher Arena.

On Saturday, February 1, 2014 a puck-drop ceremony marked the unveiling of the renovated Ed Meagher Arena. In May, 2013 the arena was modernized, thanks to a $7.75 grant from the Government of Quebec and Concordia University. After 47 years the arena underwent significant renovations: a new rink that meets professional standards and an eco-friendly carbon dioxide (CO2) ice refrigeration system.

In September 1966, L. Ian MacDonald '66, editor of the "Loyola News", suggested that the new arena be named after Ed Meagher. Ed dedicated 55 years of his life to Loyola as a student, athlete, teacher, coach, athletic director, administrator, alumni director and friend. Ed died in 1995. At his funeral at St. Patrick's Basilica, 1500 mourners, both young and old, came to bid farewell to a legend.

THE HISTORY OF LOYOLA CRESTS

The history of the Block LH and the All Activity Letter, in everyone’s memory, goes back to Loyola College’s earliest days, but there are no references to either of the awards in the early yearbooks.

Block LH

The Block LH is awarded to students who have participated in extra-mural team sports at the senior level. The award can be received only once. There are Block LH crests dating back to 1929 and All Activity Letters dating back to the 1940’s.

The All Activity Letter

The All-Activity Letter, a capital "L", is an honour bestowed on a Secondary Five student at graduation. It rewards the student who has participated in athletic and non-athletic extra-curricular activities. Activities are awarded points, accumulated over the five-year period a student is at Loyola.

Jack McMullan '49

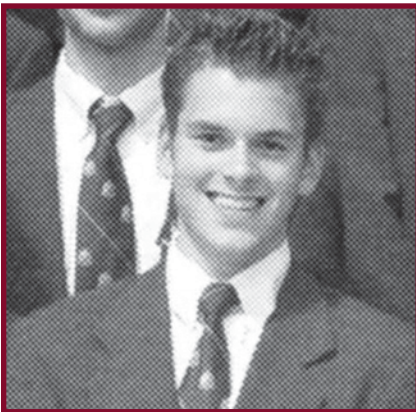

Michael Froeschl '88

In 1965 the criteria for the All Activity Letter required a minimum of 500 points. 200 came from athletics, where an athlete must have played at least one extra-mural sport. 150 points came from non-athletic activities. One bar was awarded for each 150 points over the 500 minimum. A student had to maintain a 65% average in 4th High and a 65% overall average.

Nicolas Leveque 2003

High School All Activity Award winners in this article begins in 1949 as there are no records of winners prior to the 40's. These winners also won the Loyola Medal, awarded by the Alumni Association to the most representative graduating student.

In 1977 the criteria rose from 500 to 600 points, with 250 from athletic activities and 200 from non-athletic activities. The bar criteria remained the same. In 1980 the criteria was still 600 points, with 200 from athletics and 200 from non-athletic activities. The bar criteria was unchanged.

Annual Giving The Gift of a Loyola Education

What better gift is there than giving a student the opportunity to reach his full potential?

Nearly 1 in 6 of our students would not be able to attend Loyola without the financial support of donors like you.

The socio-economic diversity of our students differentiates our school from other schools. Help us keep this tradition alive.

Would you consider a tax receiptable gift to the Loyola High School Foundation?

Jesuits at Loyola

Editor's note: One hundred years ago the teaching staff at Loyola High was predominately composed of Jesuit Fathers, with a modicum of lay teachers. Today, the configuration is the exact opposite. In spite of this, Loyola has remained Jesuit and Catholic and still challenges its young men to become intellectually competent, open to growth, religious and committed to doing justice in the service of others. The Ignatian spirit of care and concern for the individual is still prevalent. Although we are still blessed with a few Jesuits, it is difficult to accept that our young men today do not have firsthand contact with the wit of a Father Breslin, the compassion of a Father Cass or the enthusiasm of a David Eley.

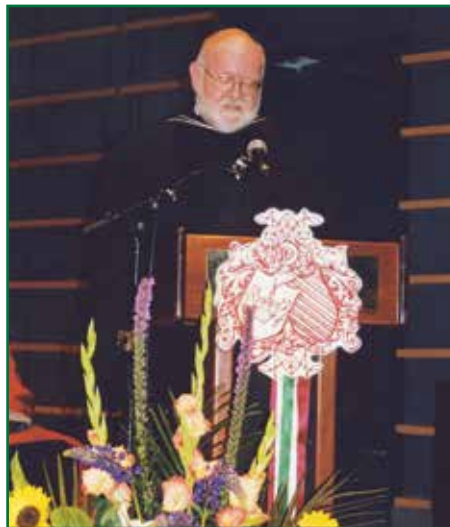

This is the fourth reminiscence of a Jesuit Father who had an influence on us in our formative years as students at Loyola High. It is written by Matthew Eramian, class of 1998. If you have "a story to tell" about one of the Jesuits who taught you and had an influence on you, please forward it to Bob Shaughnessy at shaughnessyr@loyola.ca Hopefully Loyola will always have a Jesuit presence in the years to come.

Lent is a very solemn and reflective time for Christians around the world, and as members of the Loyola Family, it is hard for us to enter into this season without thinking of Father Eric Maclean, who passed away seven years ago on Ash Wednesday. I first met Fr. Maclean during the school's centennial celebrations in 1996 when he was the Provincial of the Society of Jesus. I remember holding a maypole and preparing to walk down the Windsor Hotel's famous Peacock Alley when Fr. Maclean showed up. Dressed in his finest priestly attire, he looked regal, distinguished, and had an aura of respectability about him when he spoke. Little did I know that this venerable man who shook my hand would eventually become my teacher, my fellow board member, and most importantly, my friend. Outside of his clerical attire, Fr. Maclean was not the most elegant dresser (it's hard for me not to picture him wearing his trademark worn out cardigan) but in all the years that I knew him, he never lost that aura of dignity to me.

Much has been said publicly about the man who dedicated thirty-three years of his life to Loyola. Fr. MacLean was known for his vision, his financial prowess, his deep sense of community, and of course, his fondness for parties. But I want to touch on one of the many personal memories that I have of the man who helped me prepare for public speaking competitions, who I shared good times with, and who showed up at my grandfather's wake and led an impromptu prayer service. He was always going above and beyond.

During my time at Loyola, I was involved in many of the school plays. One year, the play was a modern day version of Molière's "The Miser", and attendance was more than disappointing. I was playing the role of a drunk, so I spent the majority of the play passed out on stage, which gave me a perfect view of the audience. Although it was discouraging to see a lot of empty chairs, every single night of the production Fr. Maclean was sitting in the front row. It was then that I became acquainted with his notoriety for nodding off, as I realized that I wasn't the only one who was passed out! Fr. Maclean's napping was the stuff of legend; he was well known for his dozing off during school assemblies, meetings, liturgies, and even at Stratford! I never knew how much of our play Fr. Maclean actually saw, but his support meant the world to our cast and crew. He would congratulate us after each performance and made us feel that all the months we dedicated to the show were worth it in the end.

There are numerous Fr. Maclean stories out there, but the common denominator was how he expressed his great concern for others. He would show up to help the parents set up for the grad dance, by wheeling in his drink cart and regaling them with stories. He would entertain The Mothers' Guild and casually remind them that they reaffirmed his vow of celibacy. He would scare the living daylights out of me when he would bellow out in his very distinguishable voice, "How's Matthew doing today?" But he always actually wanted to know. You don't always remember what a teacher says, but you never forget how they make you feel. In the case of Father Eric Maclean, you remembered both, as he worked to inspire you to live life as a true man for others for the Greater Glory of God.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Editor's note: From time to time, Loyola Today highlights Alumni from a specific decade. In this issue, we return to the nineties. We asked four individuals to reflect on their time at Loyola and to tell us what has transpired since they left the "hallowed halls".

NESTOR AMAYA, 1991

Nestor's journey after Loyola eventually led him to McGill University in 1993. For the next four years he toiled in the department of Electrical Engineering, along with his fellow '91 Loyola classmates Steven DiGregorio and Micheal Venditti. In his last year, Nestor was required to write a thesis, and for those of you interested in such matters, it was named "Optimal Viterbi decoding and implementation for speed or area-constrained systems." He followed this up with Graduate courses in Data Communications, DSP, VLSI design, Image Processing and others. He even found time to teach a few math courses in Advanced Calculus and Partial Differential Equations.

While all this was going on, he started dating his wife, Patricia Lovett, whom he knew from high school. Patricia had graduated from QAA in '92, and they met again at McGill. Fr. Rob Brennan married them in Vaudreuil on June 10, 2000 as witnessed by many of his good Loyola friends. Nestor's career took them to Ottawa, where they started a family and today, they are the proud parents of two wonderful girls, Nadia, seven, and Naomi, eleven. Before kids, they enjoyed traveling for culture, but now they're happy just to take a break somewhere warm and sandy.

After a successful educational process, Nestor worked at Nortel as a chip designer and at various other high-tech companies. For the next twelve years he honed his skills as a System Architect before founding Covelo Consulting in Ottawa where he is currently President. Covelo, last year's major sponsor of the Foundation Golf Tournament at Royal Montreal, now employs over eighteen engineers across Canada. Covelo offers FPGA-based products and services in the audio/video networking space to companies like Cisco Systems. For the past five years, it has first been a service company, but this year will see the launch of their first products – a family of IEEE-AVB System-on-Chips, which they hope to sell to companies such as Miranda of Montreal. Needless to say, Nestor has been burning the candle at both ends. "I am passionate about building a company, both for the challenge but also the rewards that it brings to our community."

"My stay at Loyola was both formative and fun. It taught me the value of service to others, and I developed some great and lasting friendships. I am a better person thanks to my time there, and I feel indebted to the school and the staff who supported me during my stay."

MIKE MUELLER, 1991

Mike graduated from Loyola in 1991, enrolled in the Pure and Applied Science Program at John Abbott College, and between semesters, spent the summer of '92 in the Graduate School of Design at Harvard University. In 1993, he was admitted to the School of Architecture at the University of Waterloo. Over the next six years he achieved Bachelors in Environmental Studies and Architecture with semesters abroad in Rome and Helsinki and Co-op work terms in Ottawa, Boston, Helsinki and Montreal.

From 1999-2004, he started his career in Architecture with a small Manhattan firm. After five years in the "Big Apple", he was the Project Architect for HKS Inc. in Salt Lake City where he worked on a variety of large healthcare and commercial projects. It was a great change of pace from the city that never sleeps and he loved the great skiing, hiking, and traveling over the western states for work and pleasure. In 2009, he returned to Canada as Project Architect for the IBI Group in Toronto and Montreal. After a year of subway design in Toronto, he "returned home" at the end of 2010 to work on the MUHC Glen Campus project, where he still goes to work every day.

About six months after his return, Mike met his future wife, Gabrielle

Goodfellow, another roundabout traveller, having made it home from working several years abroad for the UN. They were married in 2012 in Dorval, with a strong Loyola presence. The ceremony was officiated by Hon. Gary D.D. Morrison '70 and attended by dad, Harald '64, uncle, Guntram '59, and brothers Peter '91 and Eric '94. Gabrielle's uncle, Henri Roy '64 and brother Vincent '96, were also in attendance. In February of 2013, Margo Yvette was born and to complete the full circle of moving back to his roots in Montreal, they bought a house in NDG last fall. Mike still runs and will be competing in his fifth marathon this May as well as hiking, reading drawing and travelling. He volunteers as a driver for "the Dans La Rue van" and helping the city's homeless youth. He also serves as a Director on the LHSAA.

"We met so many amazing fellow students that even today, when we cross paths, it is a pleasure to strike up a conversation and reminisce. There were lots of great moments just hanging out in NDG or and on the train ride to/from the West Island. We now appreciate the lessons we learnt from playing football, from team spirit to surviving long practices and tough games. A special thanks to inspiring teachers like Ed Meagher who pushed us hard to work hard and excel. Thanks Loyola."

KEITH FLEMING, 1994

After leaving the hallowed halls of Loyola, Keith spent two years in Health Sciences at Marianopolis College and in the fall of 1996, was admitted into Medicine at McGill. He then spent five years at Boston Medical Center in the Boston University Diagnostic Radiology residency program. An additional year of fellowship training in neuroradiology at the Cornell affiliated hospitals in NYC completed his training in Diagnostic Radiology. He currently works at Mid Coast Hospital, in Brunswick, Maine.

In 2005, he married Anne Chalmers. His brother Jesse Fleming '96 was his best man and Mike Wodzicki '94 was also in attendance. Keith and Anne, along with their three daughters, live in Yarmouth, Maine, just north of Portland. Keith has remained active, having climbed Mt. Kilimanjaro, hiked the Inca trail in Peru and quarterbacked a Division "A" Flag Football team for many years. He does a lot of swimming and running, including a half marathon last May. He and his wife enjoy travelling, but trips have been limited recently with the young children.

Keith extends a special thanks to math and science teachers, Mr. Ruddy, Mr. Shaughnessy and Mr. Sanders, for fostering his love of math and science, and for laying the foundation for a lifetime in the sciences; to Mr. Parr, a wonderful English teacher and the chess club moderator; to Mr. Brennan, a great teacher and moderator of the swim team, and to Ms. Haughey, for music and choir. There are fond memories of all his football and basketball teammates and coaches: Messrs. Scanlan, Newman, Ruscito, Burke and Fr. Brennan, and his first, and most influential, quarterback coach in Bantam football in the fall of '90 - Paul Donovan (where is he now?). He recounts: "I still remember the famous QB sneak play, a Dive 10 with Rob Zeliger or Eric Mueller at center. Then there was Mike Guloy feeding me passes in the post for easy lay-ups, and those great swim relays with Chris Topham Corey Coon-Cassily and Ian Bigney."

"It was not all roses. I also remember the defeat suffered by me and my running mate, Eric Khairy, in the '93 school co-president election, at the hands of Mike LeCouter and Tony Arcoraci. I learned a lot from that experience, and it was interesting to participate in student council as "leaders of the opposition". I look forward to the 20th reunion, but will sadly miss my friend, our classmate Denis O'Connor, who passed away March 2012.

I remember wanting to go to Loyola for the strong academics and sports programs. What I didn't fully realize going in was the moral and ethical code of Loyola. That has helped me as much as, or more than, any of the academics or athletics. I strive to live as a 'man for others' through my work and in my personal life. Here's to a great reunion in October."

MICHAEL SCALZO, 1997

After graduating from Loyola High in 1997, Michael enrolled in Dawson College. Two years later, he was admitted to the John Molson School of Business and earned his Bachelor of Commerce with a Major in Finance. While at University, Michael pursued his love of hockey and went on to play Junior "AA". However, in his last year at Concordia, he put hockey on the back burner because he started full-time work at Vitesse Transport Corporation, a company that specializes in cross-border transport, third-party logistics, flatbed, dry van and temperature-controlled trucking services, including warehousing.

It didn't take long to realize Michael's abilities and long-term potential and in 2005, he was made a partner. Under Michael's stewardship, the company has grown from a brokerage division with no equipment, to one of the top hundred carrier companies in Canada, with a staff of more than 140 employees. His job requires extensive travelling throughout the USA and Michael regularly attends industry-specific conferences south of the border. Needless to say, his hard work has paid off. Today, Michael is Vitesse's Executive Vice-President and Chief Financial Officer and has been the backstop for the purchasing, administrative operations, finance and accounting functions of the company.

In 2008, he married Nadia Chartrand and they are the proud parents of two girls, Danica, four and Milena, one. A Montrealer, Michael still finds time to help out his alma mater as he currently sits on the Board of Directors of the LSHAA, participates in the NDG Food Drive and is one of the organizers of the Annual Development Golf Tournament at Royal Montreal. Clearly Michael recognizes the need to give back to his community, exemplifying the “Man for others” credo.

“I remember my days at Loyola quite fondly, especially my last year where I was on the Grad Committee, went on that amazing ski trip and had a wonderful year playing hockey. Of course, I had to put up with the likes of Guerrero and Garofalo, but I did it. Great times with Mr. Brennan, Dubee and Donnini and there was SEM with Mr. Shag. All in all, the school gave me the tools to succeed. I cannot thank Loyola enough for the solid life foundation it provided for me.”

Winter Sports at Loyola

Here's a happy group of wrestlers – they had just won the Ed Meagher Tournament. A few weeks later, they lost the GMAA title by the narrowest of margins. Nevertheless, it was another great year for Loyola wrestlers. Congratulations boys and kudos to their coaches: JP Mancini '09, Andrew Cowell and Alex Dias.

This January, the 44th “Ed Meagher Sports Tournament” had its traditional spot in the school calendar and the school welcomed over 600 student athletes in Hockey, Basketball and Wrestling. Once again, Chairman Bob Lafave and the Sports Tournament Committee, which is made up of alumni, parents – both past and present – as well as numerous Loyola teachers and staff, ensured the smooth running of the top High School tournament in the city. It's wonderful to see so many parents still serving, even though their sons have long graduated.

The three hockey teams all made it to the finals and all played against College Jean Eudes. All three games were most entertaining although only Coach Brian Traynor's Bantams emerged on top. Ryan Hurst's Bantam Basketball team took home the gold and for the third consecutive season, the Wrestlers were victorious. The tournament's ideals of good sportsmanship and fair play were evident in every event, a testament to all that Ed held dear.

Each year, the Tournament introduces an Honorary Chairman. Thirteen years ago, Paul Marceau's son Philip, entered Secondary One. Since then, Paul has donated his time, energy and talents, ensuring the smooth operation of the tournament. Thanks Paul for all you do. Each year, the Tournament Committee also presents the “Ed Meagher Scholarship” and a check for a $1000 to a graduating student who is involved in athletics and who has a commitment to excellence. This year's winner was Brian Foster, who excelled in football, wrestling and rugby. Congratulations Brian, and continued success in your studies and sports.

It wasn't long after the tournament that all the school teams were involved in playoffs. The wrestling program continued its strong performance and missed City Gold by the narrowest of margins. All three basketball teams showed promise but did not make the finals. For you swimmers of yore, you will be happy to know that the swim team won the Bantam, Midget and aggregate Championships. Loyola's strong hokey tradition again demonstrated its steel with the Peewee and Bantam teams winning City Gold, while the Juveniles were one second away from doing the same when Cooper Academy scored and then won in overtime. Congratulations to all the players and coaches – the spring season awaits.

Another chapter has been written and we look forward to next year, and to be able to once again, marvel at the skill and enthusiasm of these student athletes.

Regiment. After leaving high school, William Joseph Ryan joined the Jesuit seminary. Shortly after, he left the seminary to become a parachutist with the Royal Canadian Regiment. He was twenty-two years old when he was killed. Loyola remembers the sacrifice of William Joseph Ryan and also the nearly two thousand Loyola alumni who served, and those who gave their lives, in the many terrible wars of the 20th and 21st centuries.

The Remembrance Day Ceremony is an annual event in the school and by the time the boys are in secondary five, we hope and pray they understand Santayana's famous maxim, "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to fulfil it."

Loyola Joins LinkedIn.

We have recently launched a members-only Loyola alumni group on LinkedIn. The group is a forum to reconnect, to share news, job openings and ideas, to hear about developments at Loyola and to find out about alumni gatherings in your region. We hope you will benefit from, and enjoy, networking with fellow Loyola grads in this members-only space.

Another way of searching for Loyola alumni on LinkedIn is by using the Alumni Tool. Anyone who has indicated "Loyola High School" in his education profile will turn up in the search. The results are then sorted by "where they live", "where they work" and "what they do". If you have not already done so, we encourage you to include Loyola in your education profile so that other alumni with similar professional interests can search and connect with you.

Irishman of the year

'48 Joe Mell is Irishman of the Year for 2014. This is an honour that is long overdue. His commitment to serving others started at the age of sixteen when he and his brother Leo started coaching a softball team in “The Pointe”. Over the next thirty-five years, Joe encouraged a host of volunteers and sponsors to support organized sports in The Pointe and that they did. “Leo’s Boys” fielded 110 teams annually in all sports, enabling 1600 youngsters the opportunity to have a chance to excel. In his later years, he was involved in countless organizations, from setting up halfway residences, to reintegrating prisoners back into society, to a native healing center for aboriginals. As he has done for over sixty years, he still stages a New Year’s Eve show at the Veterans’ Hospital. Close to a thousand people recently attended “The St. Patrick’s Day Breakfast” to recognize his contributions to the community and to say thanks Joe for truly being a “man for others”. '13 Alex Loven was among a group of thirteen climbers, including five young adults ranging in age from seventeen to twenty, who climbed 19,000 foot Kilimanjaro, Tanzania, in January of this year. This was done in support of "Let Me Learn", a McGill sponsored project in aid of a secondary girls school in Tanzania. The group, paying all their own expenses, raised $18,000.00. You can learn more about the program by going to the "Let Me Learn" web site. According to his mum (Alex won't like this): "Alex was a ROCK and pretty much lead the group up the mountain. He was a model of endurance and perseverance to all". He is pictured on the right.

Alumni CSP in Action

For over ten years, the LHSAA has supplied the manpower to help collect food and donations for The NDG Food Depot. This year, over fifty alumni (a number of them are pictured below), spent a Saturday morning at the end of November driving their cars up and down the streets of NDG. They were accompanied by Loyola students and in some cases, family members. Most of them had not met the Loyola students who helped them fill their cars when going from house to house. But to a man, they echoed the comments of George Lackenbauer '62: "Those two boys were just wonderful; full of enthusiasm and never complaining about having to give up a Saturday morning - they were a pleasure to be with. The school should be proud of them." Amen!
